The P2I Parent Leadership Development program has at its core the Community Learning Theory (CLT) Approach.

Community Learning Theory is an approach for bringing people together to create self-awareness, knowledge, relationships and power to advance the group's vision for self, community or social betterment. It is also a process for bringing parents together to establish relationships of community, create desired knowledge and wisdom, and develop their power for positive personal, family, community, and school change.

1. CLT is a process/approach that builds among participants, communities of mutual support and trust for collaboration.

2. CLT seeks to create group environments that promotes dialogue and reflection, and encourages positive action.

3. CLT creates environments that nurture parents’ ability to transform their empathy and learning into action, i.e., developing trusting relationships, co-powering, and advancing positive changes for the home, school and community.

4. CLT values every person for who they are and their experiences in order to build meaningful relationships based on trust and respect, e.g., parent and parent, parent and teacher, parent and administrator, etc.

5. CLT fosters, in every person and group, a sense of self, place, purpose, direction, possibilities, and options; and each person and group has the capacity for self-discovery, improvement, shared learning and action.

6. CLT validates the fact that every group of people has the potential of becoming a learning circle that shares wisdom, creates group knowledge, and fosters personal growth.
